Since I focus primarily on guardianships, I'm fighting to protect the rights of people who are vulnerable. I'm being trusted to represent them, what they feel and what they believe, and I take that very seriously. Helping people transition to a better and safer way of living is extremely rewarding.

About Dirk

As part of the Generation Law team, Dirk focuses on guardianship investigation and litigation. Dirk works to protect the rights and welfare of clients with disabilities, while acting on behalf of family members or others wishing to serve as guardians for their loved ones. The opportunity to ensure someone's security and well-being is work that Dirk finds both challenging and rewarding, and his dedication and enthusiasm benefits clients and colleagues alike.

After graduating from The John Marshall Law School, where he distinguished himself with multiple honors, Dirk began his career as a law clerk at his father's firm of Heitz & Bromberek. It was there that he was first introduced to the practice of elder law and where he found what has since become his calling – guardianships.

Dirk grew up playing hockey and is a huge Chicago Blackhawks fan. He also enjoys golfing with friends and cooking when he has the time. His signature dish is homemade lasagna.
