Helping people plan for the future is very important and rewarding to me. I like being able to give them peace of mind knowing that their loved ones will be taken care of when they need someone the most.

About Robyn

Since joining the team at Generation Law, Robyn has focused her talents on helping clients with crucial estate planning instruments like powers of attorney and Medicaid applications. She enjoys being able to help people plan for the future and working to make their lives a little easier. Most of all, she finds that protecting the interests of others gives her peace of mind as well.

After graduating from DePaul University College of Law, she focused primarily on civil cases for a number of firms, including Manuel A. Cardenas & Associates, U.S. Law Group and Norbert N. Rosenthal & Associates. In the process, she found that she was more drawn to the transactional side of law, with a particular interest in research and writing.

Robyn was born in Toronto, Ontario, where she began skating at the age of three. She was a competitive figure skater all through high school, and can do a mean figure eight around the hallways at Generation Law.
